The English Papers of This Morning.

The Enquirer says: The political event to announce this morning is the formal withdrawal of Mr. Tilden as a candidate for the Presidential non ination. Mr. Tilden does not permit his friends, or the Convention, to withdraw him; he withdraws himself. The letter is an excellent one. It has a tone and is written in a minor key, as though he would rather not have writ-ten it, and he defends himself and refuses to drop from a certain lofty altitude to the last. But the letter is written. The withdrawal is absolute, and the Convention will take him at his word. He delicately that his is a voluntary withdrawal. Like Falstaff, he would give no man reasons upon compulsion. He takes special occasion to say that in renouncing renom-He takes special ination for the Presidency he does so with no doubt in his mind as to the vote of the State of New York or of the United States, but that he believes that his letter is a renunciation of re-election to the Presidency. But when he says that he renounces this renomination the Convention and the country will accept his statement. Whatever of embarrassment or advantage was connected with his candidacy is now eliminsted from the political calculations. He has withdrawn himself in a munly and spirited fashion, but he has withdrawn spirited fashion, but he has withdrawn himself. Horatio Seymour and Samuel J. Tilden are counted out of the list of Presidential candidates by their own words, and this is not a humiliating process. Mr. Tilden would prefer to fail of the nomination for the Presidency by the act of Mr. Tilden than by the act of the Convention; and if he does not relinquish the caudidacy with the sight, he nevertheless relinquishes.

States. Having passed my early years in an atmosphere allow with traditions of the war which secured our National Independence, and of the struggles which made our Constitutional system a Government for the people, by the scople, I learned to idealize the institutions of my country, and was educated to believe it the duty of a citizen of the Republic to take his fair allotment of care and trouble in public affairs.

than by the act of the candidacy with doors not relinquish the candidacy with doors not relinquish the candidacy with a sigh, he nevertheless relinquishes it. Whether he could or could not have been nominated, his letter is patriotic and creditable. It will avert many bitter-and creditable. It will avert many bitter-and effort to public affairs as to all other objects. It now remains for the Convention to be as which the Democratic party can suffer.

It now remains for the Convention to be as unselfish, as patriotic and as guardful of the Democratic and harmony of the Democratic party as Mr. Tilden has shown him. cratic party as Mr. Tilden has shown him-self to be in this letter. That will mean

The Gazette says: It is generally understood that Tilden has written a letter withdrawing, and it is stated on good authority that he bases his declination upon high grounds; but the locations or whereabouts of that letter is as uncertain as the milk sickness. Nobedy has been found who has seen the letter, but a great anything else or all things else. And this shows the relation—the nonconfi-dential relations that Tilden bears to the leaders of his party. There are men here who champion his cause, who are supposed to be in his confidence, but there is no one prepared to speak for him, and if there is letter from him in the city, it is held with extraordinary closeness. Abram S. Hewitt was asked yesterday if he thought Tilden was out of the field. He answered that if it were any other man than Tilden he would say, yes; but Tilden would make great sacrifices in the way of accepting after declining, for his party.—Since writing the foregoing that much-talked-of letter has come to hand. It was addressed to the New York delegation and read to them last night. It is printed in full in this paper. The letter, in tact, is a strong appeal for the THE English language, it appears, is not adequate to the construction of a lownright, straight-out, unmistakable atter of resignation or withdrawal.

A convict Communist was yesterday lected to a municipal office in France. coming out of the room where the letter was read, he remarked, "That letter nomi-nates Tilden." The old man's shoes have not been vacated. Only in his person, and GARIBALDI was defeated in the municipal election at Rome yesterday. The trappings of a prince proved more effectral than the agitator's crimson garand now again it is the Gramercy Park cipher statesman against the field.

The Commercial says: Yesterday, the average citizen accepted with somewhat greater confidence than he will do to-day, the assurance that Mr. Tilden's withdrawa was a certainty, and that therefore there would be no New York candidate, and speculation was rife. The Payne boom had evidently not captivated the multitude. census enumerators are compensated in proportion to the number of names returned by them, and if they resort to dishonesty in their reports there is every reason why it should be in favor of increasing rather than decreasing the population of cities. The rivalry between St. Louis and Chicago has led the people of those cities to such inflated notions of their greatness that the plain in the captivated the multitude. The Thurman boom passed away at the conference without a cold collation at Columbus. The Bishop boom was not strong, though not wanting sympathetic boosting. The Jewett boom was principally apparent in an abundance of admirable likenesses passed conspicuously on the streets. The Groesbeck boom had not extended beyond Clitton and the people of those cities to such inflated notions of their greatness that the plain judgment was that Ohio and New York were ruled off. Upon this basis of opera-tions, the dark horses appeared from Connecticut, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Dela ware and Indiana. One consultation in which the representatives of four Eastern States were concerned reached the opinion that if Tilden and Seymour were off, Mr. Ingersoll, of Connecticut, had the best po-sition. There was also a statesman of the name of Platt, from New York.

Also two Jerseymen, Parker and Randolph. Randall was reported out of patience with Tilden touching the Payne presumption. Bayard has friends who are pushing and confident. Field develops in a surprising manner, and may lead on the first ballot. One of the symptoms of strength in his case is the enthusi asm with which he is advocated and the bitterness with which he is opposed. Hancock is the soldier whose figure looms be-ore the Convention, and his manly beauty and chivalrous fame compel admiration even where they do not extort support. If Governor Hendricks had been so complacent as to have advocated "the old ticket" through the years during which he has been opposing Tilden and applauding himself, the withdrawal of the latter would have been equivalent to nomination of the former. Now, however, he is perhaps the most impossib e of candidates.—In connec-tion with Mr. Tilden's letter we have Mr. Watterson's annotation, and we do not reach the conclusion that Mr. Tilden's high appreciation of the duties that the Presidential office would bring upon him and his certainty that he could be "re elected," together with his history as a reformer, his wrongs as a Claimant, and his apprehension that his strength is unequal to the great work, quite removes him from the reach of the Conventi n. If the Convention would rise up and demand him, we see no reason that he should not devote himself to duty according to the measure of his strength. Read by the light of Mr. Vatterson's midnight interview, the letter grows mysterious. It seems to us to enlarge rather than remove the embarrassnents of the Democracy. The German Papers.

The Volksblatt says: The weakest candidate who could be put up by the Democrats is Thurman. He would be buried in Ohio alone by at least 30,000 majority.

New York, June 18th, 1880.

To the Delegates from the State of New York to the Democratic National Convention: Your first assembling is an occasion on which it is proper for me to state to you my relation to the nomination for the Presidency, which you and your associates are commissioned to make in behalf of the Democratic party of the United

It was, I presume, the success of efforts, in which, as a private cit zeu. I had shared, to overthrow a corrupt combination then holding do minion in our Metropolis, and to purify the Judiciary, which had become its tool, that induced the Democracy of the State in 1874 to nominate me for Governor. This was done in spite of the protests of a minority that the part I had borne in those reforms had created autagonism fatal to me as a candidate. I feit constrained to accept the many are to be found who undertake to nomination as the most certain means of putting talk about its contents. But it is a fact the power of the Gubernatorial office on the side of keform, and of removing the impression, letter and Tilden's real intentions than wherever it prevailed, that the faithful discharge nomination as the most certain means of putting wherever it prevailed, that the faithful discharge of one's duty as a citizen is fatal to his usefulness as a public servant.

The breaking up of the Canal Ring, the better ms agement of our Public Works, the large re-duction of taxes and other reforms accomplished during my administration, doubtless occasioned my nomination for the Presidency by the Democ racy of the Union, in the hope that similar pro cesses would be applied to the Federal Government. From the responsibilities of such an undertaking, appalling as it seemed to me, I did not

In the canvass which ensued the Democratic party represented reform in the administration of the Federal Government and a restoration of our complex political system to the pure ideals of its United States, by a majority of more than a quarter of a million, chose a majority of the Electors to cast their votes for the Democratic candidates for President and Vice President.

It is my right and privilege here to say that I was nominated and elected to the Presidency absolutely free from any engagement in respect to the exercise of its powers or the disposal of its patronage. Through the whole period of my re-lation to the Presidency I did every thing in my power to elevate and nothing to lower moral standards in the competition of parties.

By what nefarious means the basis for a false count was laid in several of the States I need not recite. These are now matters of history, about which, whatever diversity of opinion may have existed in either of the great parties of the coun try at the time of their consummation, has since practically disappeared.

I refused to ransom from the Returning Boards of Southern States the documentary evidence by the suppression of which, and by the substitution of fraudulent and forged papers, a pretext was made for the perpetration of a false count.

The constitutional duty of the two Houses of Congress to count the Electoral votes as cast and to give effect to the will of the people as expressed by their suffrages was never fulfilled. An Electoral Commission, for the existence of which I have no responsibility, was formed, and to it the two Houses of Congress abdicated their duty to make their count by a law enacting that the count of the Commission should stand as final, unless overruled by the concurrent action of the two Houses. Its false count was not overruled, owing to the complicity of a Republican Senate with the Republican majority of the Commission. Controlled by its Republican majority of eight to seven, the E ectoral Commission counted ou the men elected by the people and counted in the men not elected by the people.

That subversion of the election created a new issue for the decision of the neople of the United tions here yesterday the Clericals were al-States, transcending in importance all questions most entirely triumphant. people.

The immense growth of the means of co influence over the ballot-box which is at the disposal of the party having possession of the execu-tive Administration had already become a presen evil and a great danger, tending to make election irresponsive to public opinion, hampering the power of the people to change their rulers, and enabling the men holding the machinery of Government to continue and perpetuate their power. It was my opinion in 1876 that the opposition, attempting to change the Administration, needed at least to include two-thirds of the voters at the opening of the canvas in order to retain a ma-

If, after such obstacles had been overcome and a majority of the people had voted to change the administrations of their Government, the men in office could still procure a false count founded upon frauds, perjuries and forgeries, furnishing a pretext of documentary evidence on which to base that false count, and if such a transaction were not only successful, but if, after allotment of its benefits were made to its contrivers, abettors and apologists by the chief beneficiary of the transaction, it were condoned by the people, a practical destru tion of elections by the people would have been accomplished. The failure to install the candidates chosen by the people, a contingency consequent upon no act or omission for the last three years, and until now, when the Democratic party by its delegates in National Convention assembled shall choose a new leader the involuntary but necessary representative of this momentous issue.

As such, denied the immunities of private life without the powers conferred by public station, subject to unceasing falsehoods and calumnies from the partisans of an Administration laboring in vain to justify its existence, I have neverthe less steadfastly endeavored to preserve to the Democrat c party of the United States, the su-preme issue before the people for their decision next November, whether this shall be a Government by the sovereign people through elections. or a Government by discarded servants holding over by force and fraud. And I have withheld no sacrince and neglected no opportunity to uphold, organize and consolidate against the enemies of representative institutions the great party which, alone, under God, can effectually resist their over-

Remarkable Cure of Scrofulous Face. MR. H. R. STEVENS—Deer Sir I can testify to the good effect of your medicine. My little beyond as a scrofulous sore break out on his head as large as a quarter of a dollar, and it went down his face from one ear to the other, under his neck, and was one solid mass of sores. Two bettles of your valuable Vegetine completely cured him.

Very respectfully,

MRS, G. R. THATCHER.
